Strengths

Offense: Consistent and well-rounded scorer... Scores efficiently against smaller guards... Scores at all 3 levels of the floor... Great slashing off the ball, in the 90th percentile as a cutter going towards the rim... Comfortable handling the ball in the pick and roll... Can make a play when given the opportunity as seen with 3.6 assist per game average... Deceptively explosive attacking the rim in a straight line... Average shooter who can't be ignored from distance. Circus shot finisher who can switch hands in midair.

Defense: Great defensive rebounder on the wing... Guarded the 2 through the 4 positions in college... Strong enough to hold his own in the post against longer players... Solid sliding his feet on the perimeter... No glaring holes in his approach and ability as a defender.

Weaknesses

Offense: No "shake" in his handle... Very little creativity off the bounce... Release point not always consistent on his jumper... Struggles to turn the corner

Defense: Doesn't create many turnovers... Struggles containing quicker smaller players in isolation situations... Average level foot speed on the perimeter.

Intangibles

Bach is a very calm and patient player who doesn't appear to get intimidated by the big moment. Above average IQ allowed him to develop into a scorer who can be effective regardless of how the defense plays him. Great court awareness in transition.

Overview

Rasmus Bach is a wing who brings an intriguing combination of defensive consistency and offensive versatility to the table. A mature player who knows his game, Bach will be able to contribute immediately in a variety of rolls to a professional team's offense. Bach is a jack of all trades who put up very consistent numbers against many qualities of competition.
