Strengths

Offense: Bouncy athlete with good instincts around the rim... Solid touch on his turnaround jumper in the post... Explosive when jumping off two feet... Was simply too long and quick for division II big men in the post... Quick leaper who gets to offensive rebounds first... Great transition big man who gets down the court quickly... Terrific combination of strength and foot speed as a rim running pick and roll big man.

Defense: Gifted shot blocker and true rim protector in every sense... Has the mobility to effectively switch onto guards and stick with rangier big men... Plays with a lot of fight and physicality... Great disruptor who gets a lot of steals and deflections... Tremendous potential as a defender.

Weaknesses

Offense: Needs to be stronger with the ball on put backs and face-ups... Raw post-game that doesn't contain any countermoves currently... Needs to react and pass out of post double teams quicker... Could really use a jump shot to keep larger and slower defenders honest.

Defense: Leaves his feet too often trying to block every shot... Gives up ground against stronger defenders in the post... Fouls often, staying out of foul trouble will be a struggle... Lacked overall discipline as defender despite incredible talent.

Intangibles

Mawugbe is a slender post player who isn't afraid to get physical with much heavier players... This willingness to play with grit and hustle is going to help him a ton at the next level where he will face off against players just as athletic as him... He can get frustrated when his shots aren't falling and has to stop floating through games which happened on occasion.

Overview

Selom Mawugbe is one of the most physically gifted post players in division II basketball. His intuition for blocking shots can't be taught and he already shows flashes of elite rim protection and help side rotation as a sophomore. His offensive game is raw, but his high activity allows him to get his team extra possessions and find ways to go around stronger defenders. If he can engage himself 100% of the time he is going to be a rim running big man in transition and high screen situations where he can use his excellent mobility.
